Hopeful for Something Out of Conference

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON, Feb. 19 — Two tigers moved up close to examine each other again, and again they drew to watch and wait and sharpen their claws.

That may be the historians' description of the Berlin meeting, which began Jan. 25 and ends this week, between the Big Four foreign ministers.

Three of them from the West—United States, Dulles, Britain's Eden, France's Bidault—have talked four weeks with Russia's Molotov.

Neither said was expected to yield anything. Neither did. In that sense the meeting was not a disappointment.

But history may consider it a tragic disappointment if it turns out this was the last chance the Big Four had to settle their differences peacefully before World War III.

At Berlin the stumbling blocks were peace treaties for Germany and Austria, as they had been in one meeting after another since 1946.

This was only the latest in a series. The previous one was in September 1949. There may be others in the years to come.

If that's so, then this one, in spite of the attention it attracted

Wilson, Judy Barr, Mary Ann Jones, and Charlotte Wilson.

Coming and Going

Mrs. Clyde Monts left Tuesday via plane for San Francisco, California, to attend the wedding of her daughter, Miss Betty June Monts, and the Reverend Robert C. Hill, today at four o'clock in the First Methodist Church.

Ike Advised to Be Kind to Democrats

BY MARVIN L. ARROWSMITH
PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP)—The political advice President Eisenhower gets from Gov. Goodwin J. Knight of California is this: if you want to defeat the Democrats at the polls, be kind to them.

The Republican governor visited with Eisenhower for half an hour yesterday at the President's vacation retreat here. And Knight said to newsmen after the session:

"I told the President his recent announcement that the best kind of Republicanism is to avoid bitter condemnation of Democrats is very popular in California, because that is the way we have been beating the New Deal here for 20 years."

Knight was alluding to Eisenhower's statement Feb. 10 that he is against extreme political partisanship.

Direction Designated
All national highways of the United States are numbered according to their general direction. East-west highways are even-numbered, while north-south highways are odd-numbered.

now, may wind up as only a tiny foot note in history.

At the time of the first breakdown over Germany and Austria this country and the rest of the West were practically unarmed; Russia was an arsenal.

Still, there was a balance between them: This country was no match for Russia in number of men under arms but this country had the atom bomb, which Russia didn't. The bomb was enough to discourage Russian attack in Europe.

In the years since 1946 both sides have sharpened their claws, pushed and pulled and tested each other without locking in a full death struggle.

Communism — Russia clinched her hold on the satellites, grabbed Czechoslovakia (1948), rushed development of the atom hydrogen bomb, achieving her first atomic explosion in 1949, her first hydrogen one in 1953 and the Chinese Communists took over all of China (1949).

At war's end the Communists, in Russia alone, ruled 200 million people. Now Communism, Russian and Chinese, rules 800 million under a solid red military alliance that stretches from central Europe and across Asia to the Pacific.

The West — Under the threat of Russia the United States moved on from the atom bomb to development of the hydrogen bomb and built up an atomic armory so fast it is beginning to put more reliance on atomic weapons, less on men.

The United States and Western Europe came out of the helplessness of their disarmament to new rearmament and formation of their own military alliance, the North Atlantic Pact (1949).

The tests — When Russia threatened to gobble Greece and Turkey, former President Truman abandoned traditional American isolationism, in peacekeeping by rearming them (1948). When Russia tried to force the Allies out of Berlin with a blockade (1948), this country smashed the blockade with the air lift.

When communism threatened impoverished Western Europe from within, this country helped it with Marshall Plan economic aid (1948). Communism tried another thrust with the invasion of South Korea (1950) but was blocked in a war that lasted three years, is not yet officially ended.

East and West grow steadily stronger. Neither, therefore, seems to think it necessary to hold anything.

Now like two tigers, each capable of uncorking sudden death, the two sides watch each other, each other, each waiting for the other to jump or stumble or, perhaps, to die of indigestion.

Legislators Peek Into Printing Cost

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Three state legislators, spurred by a report that Arkansas is paying higher prices than its sister states for printing jobs, wants an investigation of state printing contracts.

The trio asked Atty. Gen. T. J. Gentry yesterday for an opinion on whether prices set out in the contracts violated the maximums fixed by law more than 50 years ago.

Earlier in the day, the Legislative Audit Committee voted against asking Gentry for the opinion.

The legislators, Reps. J. A. Womack of Ouachita County, Hayle P. Hollis of Calhoun County, and George Holmes of Cleveland County, all members of the committee then asked for the opinion on their own.

A report by legislative Auditor Orvel M. Johnson set off the debate. Johnson said many of the state printing contracts—which

WHAT METHODISTS BELIEVE

We Believe in Eternal Life

Man, whose earthly existence is so brief and uncertain, has nevertheless eternity set in his heart by the Creator. The words of Jesus and His resurrection from the dead bring to us the assurance that for the Christian death shall be swallowed up in victory. God is eternal. Jesus is the conqueror of the grave, and we, being united with Him, share His everlasting life. Death is a doorway from a natural world into a spiritual world. Behind the thin veil that conceals from our human eyes the Blessed Country there stands One who has gone to prepare a place for us and who will one day receive us unto Himself in eternal glory. Heaven is the perfect companionship of the believer with Christ, and death is but a transition into the deeper fellowship of His nearer presence.

Give GOD a Chance NOW!

No Joking Matter

Dear Miss Dix: My 22-year-old daughter never was particularly interested in boys, even in high school. A while back, an old friend of the family, Gene, wrote her from overseas, where he's in service, asking her to write. She did, and when he came home they had a few dates. Until this point we had always joked about her boy friends, or lack of them, but when I teased her about Gene, she was quite angry, and wouldn't go out with him again. She became very disagreeable around the house, ate very little, and was easily hurt. She went to a doctor, who suggested that she go to a psychiatrist. After two months, she became less moody and began to talk about Gene quite a lot. He in the meantime, has continued his interest in her. The doctor says he's not the boy for her. Will anything straighten her out? Everything I say seems to be wrong. Mrs. H.

Not Amusing
Answer: From the very beginning, the girl's trouble seems to be just too many people butting in. During adolescence there was too much teasing about her boy friends. This is an attitude that many parents consider amusing, but the girl or boy who's the object of constant "kidding" rarely shares the adult view. More sympathetic understanding, with an attempt to help the girl make friends, would have been more in line. When finally she did find a boy friend, the joking became even less bearable since at this point she was very serious.

Gene's character, as outlined in your long letter, seems admirable; the young people were apparently quite congenial, and your daughter's sensitivity would easily have been overcome. Whether the doctor's assumption of Gene's unsuitability was well founded or not, I can't judge on the meagre information before me, but it was at least one more stumbling block in the path of a girl making a valiant try to adjust herself to romance. I suggest that the family change its attitude from jolly to serious acceptance. Try to see the problem from the girl's viewpoint, and give her all the help you can, preferably without fanfare. Sit on the sidelines, read to help, instead of trying to monopolize the center ring. Let our daughter have a chance to work things out.

Dear Miss Dix: I'm a man of 23. My girl is 35, a divorcee with two children. We both agree we are very much in love and I'm sure I am ready to accept the responsibilities. We've been companions for 14 months, yet there still seems to be a doubt whether or not we should marry. Rodney Answer: I advise you to heed the doubt. Twenty-three is young to be taking on responsibilities of your own, let alone assuming them for a whole family.

Dear Miss Dix: My current heart-throb has been negligent in keeping our last two dates. I'm so disappointed. When I first met him he gave me an inexpensive friendship ring. Should I give him another chance? I'm so lonely without him. Or, should I return his ring by mail and try to forget him?

Mary, B

Answer: Why not at least give him a chance to explain why he didn't keep the dates? You seem so attached to the man that you'll probably regret the hasty action of returning the ring by mail. He really doesn't seem too stable but he merits the courtesy of your returning the bangle in person.

Texarkana, Longview May Join CS Loop

TEXARKANA, Tex. Ark.—The possible addition of Texarkana and Longview, Tex., to the Cotton States League but must find an team baseball league into an eight-team circuit.

Horace Milan, chairman of a committee chosen by Texarkana fans to lead a drive to keep or organize baseball in this border city, says the final decision will come Saturday.

Milan said J. C. Stroud, owner of the Longview club, which is a former member of the Class B Big States League, promised to make his decision by Saturday.

Texarkana, which also fielded a team in the Big States League last year, is ready to enter the Cotton States League but must find an other team to make-up the eight team circuit.

A meeting of representatives from the two cities was to have been held yesterday but was postponed.

Present members of the Cotton States League are El Dorado, Hot Springs, and Pine Bluff, Ark.; Meridian and Greenville, Miss.; and Monroe, La.

Astronomer Sees Higher Life Elsewhere

BY ALON L. BLAKESLE
NEW YORK (AP)—We are not alone in the universe, for there are probably 100 million other planets suitable for high forms of life, says a famous Harvard astronomer, Dr. Harlow Shapley.

The life on some of them may surpass our own, with beings superior to humans, he writes in a new book, "Climate Change," published today Harvard University Press.

Dr. Shapley is cautious when it comes to estimating just how many planets may support life. He figures it this way:

Suppose only one star or sun in a million has any planets at all. And suppose only one in a thousand of those families of planets has the conditions "suitable for the life experiment." That means a near-circular orbit, proper distance from a warmth-giving star, proper mass, atmosphere, and rotation period for night and day.

That would mean only one life-bearing planet for every billion stars.

Still being skeptical, suppose that life went on to higher forms on only one of every thousand of these planets. On the others, something could have happened to end life.

That still leaves 100 million planets as life-theaters because there are so many thousands of billions of stars in the universe. Our Milky Way alone, to which we belong, has 100 billions of Milky Ways or galaxies.

These millions of planets "indicate that the life phenomenon is widespread and of cosmic significance. We are not alone. And we should admit, of course, that the animal, vegetable or other organisms on other happier planets may have far surpassed the terrestrial forms. There is no reason whatever to presume that Homo sapiens (man), Apis Mellifera (honeybees) and Corvus Americanus (ravens or crows) are the best that biochemistry and star shine can do."

No earth-sized planets have yet been detected around other stars, because the stars are too bright, and the planets are too bright, and the planets too small in gravitational mass to affect the motions of their stars by present measuring methods.

But there's evidence of a huge planet for a nearby star, named 61 Cygni, a star which can be seen with the naked eye.

Dr. Shapley says Mars is the only other planet in our sun's family which might have life of some kind.

Dr. Shapley is editor of, and writes the introduction for, the book "Views of more than 20 different scientific specialists on the causes of great climatic changes on earth, and the effects upon life."

Slight variations in the sun's heat and radiations are one main possibility of changes which produced ice ages and warm periods. Others are dust from volcanoes and the rising of continents and mountains re-directing air currents.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP)—Harrison (Bones) Dillard, one of the world's more remarkable athletes, goes after his 38th straight indoor hurdles victory in the National AAU championships tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden.

The small-size Negro who once starred for Baldwin-Wallace College, has for the past eight years been about as unbeatable at his specialty, both indoor and out, as any track man who ever lived. In that lengthy span he has been beaten twice on the boards, and never in a championship event.

It is not, however, of Dillard's superlative record over the sticks that we would sing. Rather, our mind goes back more than five years to what we will always consider the crowning achievement of an amazing career. No matter what he has done since, or will do, he can never match his tremendous feat in the 1948 Olympics at London.

At that time the little marvel was without question "the world's greatest high hurdler. He was considered a moral chameleon to win himself a gold medal at London. But then, in the official trials, the unthinkable happened. He got mixed up with the crossbars and did not even finish in the final heat. He was out of the Olympics!

But was he? Nope. He decided hurriedly that he was a 100-meter tent that, when the U. S. team sailed, he had not been a sprinter. He was not, of course, considered quite in the same class with other two, Mel Patton and Barney Ewell, but he was aboard.

It was while the American team was in training at Uxbridge, Ireland, that we made the long trip out, and, after considerable wandering around, came to a running track. No many athletes were about at the hour, but over near the little wooden grandstand this fellow wearing a familiar shield was practicing starts—over and over again.

It was Dillard, the man who was along for the ride. We asked him, perhaps not too diplomatically, if he thought he had a chance. He grinned wide.

"Sure," he said, agreeably, "everybody's got a chance. What I've got to do is learn to get out of those holes in a hurry. If I do, maybe I can make it close."

Nothing he said gave any indication of the bitter disappointment he must have felt over his failure in the hurdle trials from as far as we could see him, he still was starts, all by himself.

We often have studied a graphic photo of the start of the 100-meter final. It was snapped a fraction of a second after the gun fired, and it shows six straining sprinters in their first frantic lunge. The heads of five are in nearly perfect alignment, a beautiful start. The sixth head, Dillard's, is fully a foot in front, and several inches lower than any other.

It was a lead he never relinquished, though Ewell closed with such a rush that he appeared to have won. Ewell thought he had, too, but the official photo proved differently. Dillard, the hurdler, had equaled the Olympic records of 10.3 seconds, and his margin of victory probably was less than the advantage he had gained by his tremendous start.

duced the tickets while her husband apologetically directed the stewards with the baggage. "Most of this is trinkets to trade with the natives," he explained.

Finally in their stateroom, Frances set about making the baby comfortable while the stewards unloaded bags.

"Who brought this along?" Boyle asked, scowling at his portable typewriter.

CAB Denies Four Applications

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Civil Aeronautics Board today tentatively denied applications by Fort Worth, Tex., Fort Smith and Fayetteville, Ark., and Kansas City, Mo., for a new service by Central Airlines.

The four cities proposed that Central serve them on a route between Fort Worth and Kansas City, by way of Dallas and Paris, Tex., Fort Worth and Fayetteville, and Joplin, Mo.

The applications also were supported by Dallas and by Central. Ozark Airlines objected that the proposal, if authorized, would prejudice its own renewal case.

The board agreed with Ozark that the applications raised controversial issues which should be decided only after formal proceedings.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN
IN THE big living room, Everett Carr took the hand Shelly extended, and patting it in a fatherly way. Then he led her to a chair, and seated her, taking his own seat on the couch, close by. "You don't come to see us as often as we'd like, Shelly," he said warmly.

She looked up, smiling faintly. "Oh, Father Carr."

"I thought surely you'd come to see me today, or call me."

Now the violet eyes darkened with a question.
